

In a speech to the 3rd NERA Competition Symposium on 2nd October, Peter Freeman, Deputy Chairman of the Competition Commission, reviewed one year's operation of the new UK merger control system brought in by the Enterprise Act. He reviewed the five cases completed so far and assessed how the practice and process had developed. His verdict was that the system was working well, but its capabilities had yet to be fully tested.