

22 April 2008

Competition Commission

Regarding your actions on BAA, I wonder if you could consider their practice on taxis at airports.

I live in Edinburgh and it seems only taxis and taxi companies that pay BAA considerable fees are allowed to pickup at the airport.

As a result there are often long waits for taxis, particularly in the evenings. Taxis arriving with passengers have to drive away empty. This is not in the interest of the travelling public or of environmental pollution.

David Butler